The HUMOURIST. No. VI.

He hates Realities and hugs the Cheat,
And ſtill the Pleaſure lies in the Deceit.
GARTH.

THE World is compared to the Theatre, and the Buſineſs of it is generally conſidered as the grand Drama thereof, both by ancient and modern Writers. Human Life in ſome Degree reſembles a Maſquerade, wherein conſiſts a Medley of incoherent Characters, rudely preſſing upon each other, and acting Parts unequal to their ſeveral Abilities. I have taken the Liberty to enlarge the Compariſon, and I hope that it is a legal Licence, as it comes nearer to the Purpoſe of this Eſſay, and will aſſiſt me in proving, that Mankind plays the Cheat, and that Fallacy and Diſguiſe attend the minuteſt Actions of our Lives.

Flavio (born to make all Mankind happy but himſelf) is a Gentleman of Birth and Education; he has run thro' the ſeveral Stages with amazing Spirit and Vivacity; all his Poſſeſſions now center in his Name, indeed he ſtill enjoys a certain Gaiety, and ſuch a Correctneſs of Freedom, as adds Dignity to his Deportment and an eaſy Negligence to his Addreſs.

His chief Happineſs has ever been to deceive himſelf: In the worſt Emergency of Affairs, he has never felt much Remorſe at the Loſs of Company, his fertile Genius always ſupplying him with Proſpects of imaginary Happineſs.

This ſurprizing Genius can, by a very peculiar Diſcernment, find out, that an ideal Eſtate is preferable to a real one: He uſed to apply theſe two remarkable Lines, after the Misfortune of loſing his paternal Eſtate at Ce

When Houſe and Land is gone and ſpent,
Then Learning is moſt excellent;

From whence he drew theſe important Inferences, That Brick and Stone are periſhable Materials, that they are Tenements of an uncertain Duration, and muſt neceſſarily fill the Mind with many anxious Reflections, ariſing from the precarious Tenure of ſuch Poſſeſſions: The Parſon and the Pariſh demand their Tythes and Taxes; the Tenant is perpetually perplexing one with want of Repairs; Caſualties of all kinds, Diſtemper of the Cattle, Briefs at Church (and much is expected from a Lord of the Manor), Lawyers with their confounded Flaws and Doubts, Stewards with their unmerciful Charges, the Impertinence of Servants, Phyſicians proſcribing under the Sanction of Eminence to cut off the Thread of human Life, and the Apothecary's profuſe Viands, are the eternal Incumbrances of Men of Wealth. A Coach, that pleaſing Appendage to Independance, is rather an Inconvenience than an Eaſe; a Man wants Exerciſe, it promotes an an Appetite and helps Digeſtion; beſides, he is under a never ceaſing Dread of diſlocating his Neck, at leaſt he endangers an Arm or a Leg, and theſe are Matters that demand our moſt ſerious Conſideration. To a Man of Gallantry, there ſtill remains an Objection, ſuperior in point of Force to any yet mentioned; it is impoſſible to go incog. to ſee and not be ſeen, or partake of thoſe pretty Divertiſements that conſtitute the Life of a Man of Pleaſure; a ſaucy Coachman, or an impudent Footman, or both, eternally fall in the Way of Gallantry and Love-Intrigues.

This is the Language of Flavio, whoſe greateſt Ambition ſoars no higher than amuſing himſelf with falſe and fancied Happineſs, with Scenes of Rapture, and Proſpects of Illuſion and Deceit.

It is ſo exquiſite a Joy to the Mind of Man, to be impoſed upon, that if he cannot procure ſome Juglar to do the Job for him, he thinks himſelf in a State of never-ending Bliſs, when he is impoſing upon himſelf. Tom Eaſy, who is a jocoſe Fellow, proteſts, that one ſtrong Motive for our Devotion to the ſoftet Sex is, becauſe they are poſſeſſed of a moſt incomparable Method of cheating us, and that with wonderful Dexterity. Miſs Grave-airs cries, Lord! Mr. Sly-boots, I am all Amazement, that a Gentleman of your good natural Endowments, ſhould devote yourſelf ſo entirely to the Art of Teazing; there is nothing ſo hateful to me, as being unmercifully kiſs'd, and pull'd, and haul'd: Who cannot perceive the Impoſition, but who does not rejoice in the Perception?

To vary the Scene, and caſt our Eyes in a different Point of View, we ſhall find the ſame Taſte for Deceit, the ſame Appetite for illuſive Schemes, tho' the Method of their Operations differ.

The Patriot, bellowing with Iron Lungs againſt Men in Power, hazards his Fame upon a mere Contingency, and forfeits his Reputation by deceiving himſelf into a Place: As formerly he ſung of Liberty, he now makes Muſic of his Chains.

In one Place, I can obſerve an impious great Man, ſeemingly depreſſed with the Weight of Office, improving, tho' not obſerving, Learning or Religion.

In another Place, a wealthy Monſter ſacrificing a numerous Family by Donations to Hoſpitals, thinking to procure a good Name, by Munificence abroad and Poverty at home.

I can obſerve a wealthy Pluraliſt, battening in the Sun-ſhine of Proſperity, and exulting in the Pomp of cathedral Glory, buſied in Subſcriptions for the Widows of poor deceaſed Clergymen, when his Abilities point out a quicker Remedy; deceiving at once, Mankind by the Impoſition, and himſelf, by playing with his Conſcience.

By ſuch ſpecious Pretences, and other inſidious Means, Mankind deceive each other; and if there happens to fall in the Way one honeſt Man, free from Deceit, free from Impoſition, his want of Judgment or Diſcernment renders him a Victim to the multiplied Attacks of fraudulent Conſpiracies;

For neither Man nor Angel can diſcern
Hypocriſy, the only Evil that walks
Inviſible, except to God alone.

PARIS, October 15.

THE king's letters patents for eſtabliſhing a new chamber of Vacations, have been ſent to the juriſdictions in the provinces to be regiſtered: Some have complied with the regiſtry, but more have followed the example of the chatelet and refuſed it.

London, Oct. 30. Our correſpondent at Paris ſays, that the miniſtry differ among themſelves, ſome are for ſetting up a new ſovereign court, and aboliſh the parliament, both name and thing; whilſt others contend for a compromiſe, and the reſtitution of that illuſtrious Body.

Rouen, Oct. 21. Mr. Brunet, a magiſtrate who diſtinguiſhed himſelf by his zealous oppoſition to all innovations, is dead, and no leſs regretted than Monſieur de Franqueville. We have a very odd ſcene exhibited almoſt every night: It is a proceſſion, in which a great croſs is carried, covered with crape, accompanied by two men with wooden candles, as at funerals; they are followed by a number of perſons marching two and two, having each a flambeaux in his left hand and a cutlaſs in his right, with a caſe of piſtols ſtuck in the girdle; they ſing, in a doleful voice, the hymns libera and de profundis; being aſked whether they celebrated the funeral of the parliament of Paris, one of the maſks, for they have their handkerchiefs hanging over their faces, anſwered, no, it is the Bull Unigenitus is going to be buried; at firſt the company might conſiſt of 30, they are now ſwelled to 50 or 60. The chamber of vacations have publiſhed an edict for ſuppreſſing them, but as yet it has had no effect.

The new remonſtrances were read the 17th in the aſſembly of the chambers; they are highly applauded, and will be ſent to court before the end of the week. The dean of the parliament ſet out on Friday for Fontainbleau, in conſequence of the orders he had received from court to appear there this day.

Paris, Oct. 27. The chamber of vacations have at laſt carried their point, ſo far as to puniſh the pickpocket according to the ſentence they paſſed upon him; but it was under a guard of 200 men, and the chatelet have proteſted againſt it. The deciſive edict is in the preſs, with reſpect to the diſputes between the parliament and clergy; the town of Pontoiſe is in a manner blocked up by troops, guards are poſted at the gates, and it is ſaid that the commanding officer has orders not to let certain perſons go out. We have here very melancholy apprehenſions!

Paris-à-la-Main, Nov. 2. The magiſtrates and other Deputies of the chatelet who had been at Fontainbleau, being aſſembled, they reported to the company what had paſſed between the king and them, and a recital was made of what had been done previous to that audience; and it was thereupon proteſted, that all corrections and alterations of what had been done, by the judges and officers of the chatelet, made by the commiſſion ſent for that purpoſe, were of no effect, and that the civil lieutenant ſhould be deſired, in the name of the company, to write to the chancellor, to pray him to give the king an account of this proteſt, and that the company perſiſted in their decrees.

London, Nov. 8. On ſaturday laſt general Bland kiſs'd his majeſty's hand, on his being appointed commander of the forces in Scotland, in the room of general Churchill, deceaſed.

Rouen, Oct. 28. The dean of the parliament who has been returned from Fontainbleau theſe 2 or 3 days, had not the honour to ſpeak to the king; he only ſaw the chancellor, who, it is ſaid, declared to him, that his majeſty was not at all ſatisfied with the conduct of the parliament of Normandy.

It is not from the chatelet only that the new commiſſion meets with oppoſition, the bailliages of Tours, Meaux, and ſeveral others, having refuſed to regiſter the letters patent for eſtabliſhing that chamber, it has cauſed the heads of theſe juriſdictions to be ſummoned, to give an account of their conduct upon pain of being of being taken into cuſtody. Thoſe officers have appeared, not to acknowledge the authority of the commiſſon, but to repreſent to the commiſſioners, that not being maſters of the deliberations of their companies, they could not be made reſponſible for the reſolutions they had taken.

London, Nov. 10. According to the Amſterdam gazette, the convention which M. Duvelar, commiſſary of the French Eaſt-India company, has concluded with ours, has been preſented to the miniſters of their Britannick and moſt chriſtian majeſties, and has met with their approbation. By virtue of this convention, the two companies muſt reciprocally reſtore the territories taken by their reſpective troops ſince the year 1748, except certain diſtricts, the property of which the Engliſh company reſerves to itſelf, as being favourably ſituated for the ſafety of its ſettlements. Neither company is to concern itſelf with the quarrels that may happen between the Indian princes. The two nabobs ſet up by the influence and arms of each party, are acknowledged in that quality by both companies. By means of this regulation, which will be ſigned in a few days, if not already ſigned, it is expected, that the commerce of the two companies in the Eaſt-Indies will meet with no obſtructions while peace remains in Europe.

Some letters from Amſterdam mention the report of a new alliance in the North, in which the crown of France is one of the contracting parties; but with ſuch circumſtances as do not render it extremely probable.

Our correſpondent at Paris acquaints us, that it is impoſſible to expreſs the agitations of people's minds in reſpect to the preſent ſtate of affairs, inaſmuch as all magiſtrates who have occaſion to make public harangues, addreſs their prayers to heaven for the preſervation of the public tranquility and the reſtitution of the parliament. It is feared the parliament of Rouen will be ſpeedily exiled alſo.

London, Nov. 13. Capt. Clive, who ſerved the company ſo well during his command of the troops upon the coaſt of Coromandel, will have a conſiderable penſion during his life, as a recompence for his ſervices: Thus rewarding the valour and capacity of this officer is not only doing juſtice to his merit, but at the ſame time is an encouragement to others to follow his glorious ſteps. And as the new convention will put a ſtop to all military enterprizes in the Eaſt-Indies, 'tis uncertain whether Capt. Clive will return thither, there being no more opportunities for him to ſignalize himſelf by his martial genius.

By a letter from Paris we hear, that the grand affair on the carpet is come to that extremity that it is expected ſome heads will ſoon be ordered to be taken off, as an example to bring a noble obſtinate body of patriots to an humble ſubjection.

Chalons-ſur-Marne, Nov. 9. Some people ſay poſitively, that the grand chamber will next monday enter upon buſineſs as uſual at Pontoiſe: Others, and more in number, on the contrary, pretend that the grand chamber is ordered to Soiſſons. The magiſtrates of the chatelet aſſembled yeſterday: It is pretended that this meeting was occaſioned by their having received 12 lettres de cachet.

London, Nov. 15. We hear that 6 men of war, from 40 to 60 guns, are to ſail about February on a cruize, for the better ſecuring our commerce in his majeſty's plantations.

By a perſon lately arrived from Dunkirk we are informed, that ſome of the works going on there were ſtopp'd 'till a particular ſurvey was made and compared with the former buildings, but that the canal went forward very briſkly, the number of hands employed thereon being lately conſiderably augmented.

According to letters from Hamburgh, the couriers between Stockholm and Berlin were never more frequent than at preſent, which, with the circumſtances of conſiderable remittances, and the great aſſiduity ſhewn in raiſing recruits for the Swediſh, Daniſh, and Pruſſian forces thro'out Germany, are the only grounds for thoſe lid patriotiſm. They have at laſt diſcovered, that if right meaſures are to be purſued without expence to the public, themſelves are in the beſt condition to undertake them, as having already immenſe eſtates and great experience; while, on the other hand, the people being informed that the grand penſionaries ſcheme for regulating the finances, and the grand project for opening a free port, are to be immediately carried into execution, frame to themſelves great hopes of ſeeing commerce revive, and with it the naval power of the common-wealth.

London, Nov. 17. It is ſaid that an application will be made for a ſettled reward for apprehending ſuch as rob in the ſtreets, or on the roads, within ten miles of London, to be paid in open court upon conviction, by direction of the judge; which it is hoped will excite ſuch alacrity in purſuing offenders, as will quickly put an end to ſuch diſorders, by rendering it impracticable to eſcape.

A gentleman who arrived by the laſt packet from Holland reports, that in paſſing through the Palatinate, the officers were every where as buſy in exerciſing their recruits, completing their corps, recalling furlo's, and putting things in the ſame condition as if they were to take the field early in the ſpring, in virtue of preciſe orders from the court for that purpoſe, which occaſioned much ſpeculation.

London, Nov. 20. It is ſaid that the preſent parliament will be diſſolved in February; and that writs, returnable in 40 days, will be immediately iſſued for electing a new one, which will ſit a few weeks in May, leſt, whilſt his majeſty, who, we hear, goes to Germany in June, is abroad, all no parliament in the kingdom, we ſhould be viſited with a ſtroke, which every Briton, who has any ſenſe of his country's welfare, ſincerely wiſhes that heaven may long avert.

There is advice that a man of war which lately ſailed from Liſbon, is arrived at the Cape de Verd's, having on board land forces, in order to diſlodge the French from a ſettlement they have made there, and the neceſſary materials for building a fort to ſecure the colony.

We hear from Paris, that when ſeveral perſons of diſtinction were lately ordered into exile, the ſoldiers being drawn up puſh'd off their hats to them, but being commanded by their officers to put them on they flung them away.

They write from Frankfort, that ſome of the moſt conſiderable courts in Germany continue to arm and diſcipline their troops with ſo much eagerneſs, that thoſe who are concerned for the tranquility of the empire, cannot but look upon theſe preparations with great regret, the rather becauſe at preſent they hear of no negociations for accommodating the diſputes by which diſturbances may be excited, and which are not of ſuch a nature as to leave no hopes of accommodation in caſe ſuch negociations were put into proper hands.

Paris, Nov. 9 Every one of the members of the grand chamber of the parliament has received a lettre de cachet, whereby, it is ſaid, they are each of them enjoined to repair to Soiſſons, and to wait there for freſh orders from his majeſty.

Letters from Rouen adviſe, that the chambers of the parliament of Normandy were aſſembled the 5th, and the ſame day the repeated remonſtrances of that company were ſent to be preſented to the king. This parliament ſollicits the recalling Meſſ. Croſville and Bellgarde, who are ſtill detained at court.

Paris, Nov. 12. The members of the chatelet met the day before yeſterday, and 'twas remarked, that they were in great agitation on account of two of their brethren being ſent to the Baſtile. 'Tis aſſured that they will ſtill perſiſt in their firſt reſolution. Laſt week there were two freſh refuſals of the ſacrament; one on account of a refuſal to ſubmit to the bull Unigenitus, and the other for want of preſenting a billet of confeſſion.

PARIS, Nov. 17. The blow is at laſt ſtruck, the king, by letters patents, in the form of a declaration, dated the 11th inſtant, has erected a royal chamber, which is hold its ſeſſions in the caſtle of the Louvre, and to which the ſame authority, in matters civil and criminal, is aſſigned that the parliament had by law. On t
ber was opened by a ſolemn m
preſent the ſieur de Lamoignon,
chiefly teſtified by their ſilence.

London, Nov. 22. The c not yet given an anſwer which the earl of Albemarle has been charged to make, in reſpect to the fortifications of Dunkirk.

Private letters from Modena ſay, that the count de Monzone, who arrived there lately from Paris, has brought with him certain propoſitions, upon the acceptance or non-acceptance of which the tranquility of Italy will in a great meaſure depend.

LONDON, Nov. 24. Our correſpondent at Paris acquaints us, that there is ſcarce a night but ſome lawyer of diſtinction is carried into exile, to goal, or to court. The high chancellor moves no where without a guard; ſome of the miniſters have deſired to reſign, but the king commanded them to keep their places.

The bill for ſetting aſide the naturalizing the Jews, is paſſed the houſe of peers.

The arrival of the count de Monzone has abſolutely put a ſtand to every thing at Modena.

We learn from the Hague, that they have hopes of ſeeing the great buſineſs of the Free Port abſolutely ſettled in the next aſſembly of the ſtates.
